YOU MOVE ME

You Move Me is a new exhibition by Antlers Gallery for Winter 2014/15.

This exhibition revolves around a site-specific installation by Bristol-based artist Jo Lathwood. Jo's installation takes the form of a wooden tunnel-like structure that you are invited to walk through and explore; an intervention that breaks out of the Create Centre exhibition space. Off this main framework a select group of artists have been commissioned to respond to Jo's work and depict their interpretation on its themes - with a focus on drawing in the broadest sense. The invited artists are: Helen Jones, Laurie Lax, Olivia Jones and Synnøve Fredericks. Lighting Designer Anna Barrett has created a bespoke lighting scheme that interplays with the exhibition.

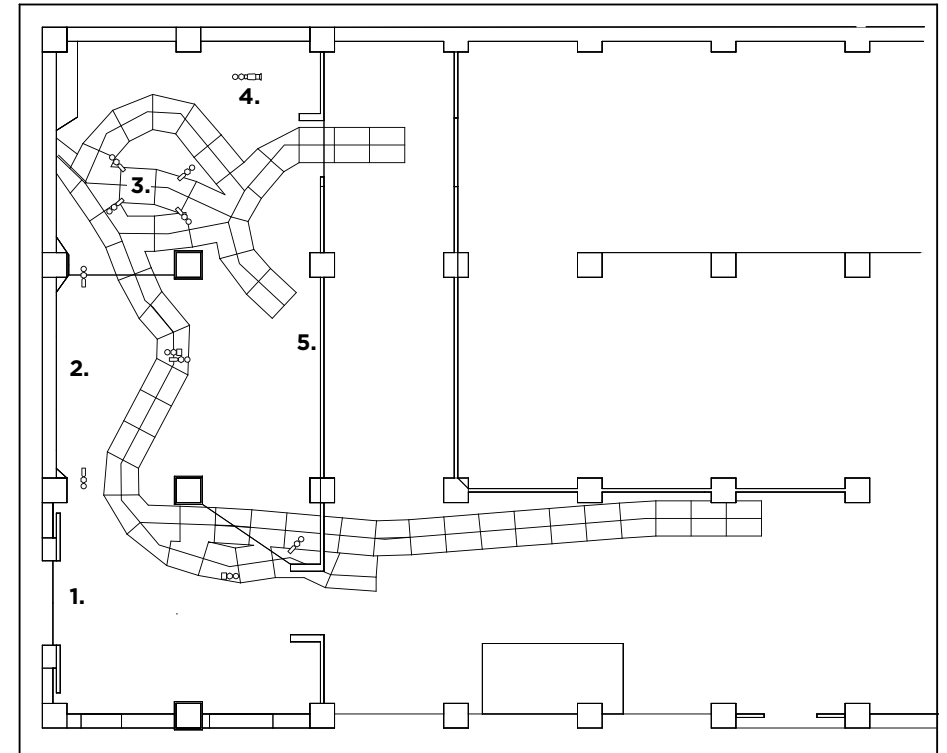

These commissions aim to affect the aesthetic and layout of Jo's structure creating an exhibition that is neither a collaboration nor a group-show; instead promoting a different format that lies somewhere between these two expected modes.

You Move Me takes direct inspiration from the 'hidden' River Frome that runs underneath Bristol city centre. The work transposes the path of the river and interference patterns allude to the movement and flow of water. In creating an immersive environment Jo wants to explore themes of (re)viewing familiar spaces around the city, and examine ways in which nature and the urban environment interrelate.

The central installation is primarily built from natural / found materials - supporting a sense of nature within an urban context, an overlap that is present in both the work and the city. The participatory nature of the piece (you have to physically navigate the passageway) builds connections with the work and supports a sense of fun and adventure.
